Henry Green

Alone, as the fragments pull away
I try to trace the outline, an atlas only shade
Warm in the fragments of the day
I pull away 'til I find aptness that will stay We dissolve in it for a brief moment
I see a light flicker in the low haze
We dissolve in it and when we fall in
Softening, we realign I'm alive, I'm alive, I'm alive
Clearing smoke from my eyes
Colour floods from both sides, high
All the fear that I felt subsides
I'm awake in the slow rise
I'm awake in the slow rise
We dissolve in it for a brief moment
I see a light flicker in the low haze
We dissolve in it and when we fall in
Softening, we realign
